

Doug,

A former colleague who worked for me as a trainee when I was in the Commission always expressed to me an interest in working in the private sector. Indeed, at one time she was going to work at McKinseys in Moscow but (I think) turned it down because she always wanted to work in the West. She is Estonian and speaks Russian, Finnish (?), French and German, and her English is perfect. Extremely bright though relatively young (I think she must be 25 ish, perhaps older). Studied in France and elsewhere. Currently in the Estonian Foreign Ministry in charge of Estonian accession negotiations (in which role I met her professionally too). If you were looking for someone to cover Central and Eastern Europe, I would recommend her for hard work, comprehension and ability to adapt, though no knowledge of energy per se. By far the best trainee I ever had. So far all I have said is that I am at Enron, is she still looking?

Brendan

----- Forwarded by Brendan Devlin/EU/Enron on 06/26/2001
01:11 PM -----

Kadri Kallikorm <Kadri.Kallikorm@mfa.ee> on 06/25/2001 08:29:23 AM
To: "Brendan.Devlin@enron.com" <Brendan.Devlin@enron.com>
cc:

Subject: RE: Hi Kadri

Dear Brendan,

It was lovely to hear from you and to realise that you have finally taken the leap into the private sector. I was just searching high and low for you a few weeks ago, because I was in Brussels for almost a week and was wondering if we might meet up for a cup of coffee. Especially as I had news to tell - all going well, I will be posted at our Embassy to Belgium and Luxembourg, starting January 2002! At the same time, I am still in principle also keeping an eye out for interesting private sector opportunities (and yes, Enron's record is most impressive.) What does the position entail more specifically? What would the requirements be?

What would you do in my place?

Best wishes,

Kadri